

Building on the Orange Surge: Socialist Perspectives

The NDP breakthrough to become the Official Opposition is a turning point in Canadian politics. Electing 103 MPs makes social class—being working class—a fundamental way to express one's political identity. But with a Harper majority government, it is vital to build a class struggle in defense of past gains—Medicare, public pensions, aboriginal treaty rights—and to fight for a new public vision of what Canadian society could be: anti-war, immigrant friendly, promoting unionized jobs and security to overcome exploitation and oppression.

Join us for a discussion about these tasks from various socialist perspectives.
